- ② limited liability
- ③ perpetual succession
- ④ Transferability of shares
- ⑤ separate property
- ⑥ common seal
- ⑦ capacity to sue & to be sued
- ⑧ Incorporated association
- ⑨ Separate ownership from management.

Salomon vs Saloman co. Ltd.

It clearly established principle of separate legal entity.

Saloman vs. Saloman's : leather merchant & boot mfr.

formed a Ltd co. when business was perfectly solvent

co. ran into difficulties and debenture holders appointed receiver & co. ran into liquidation

Total assets found < Total liabilities (crs & deb)
crs. claimed whole company's assets on the ground that company $\Rightarrow$ mere agent for Salomen.

House of lords rejected & held co. on registration having separate personality from members & shareholders cannot be equated to company.

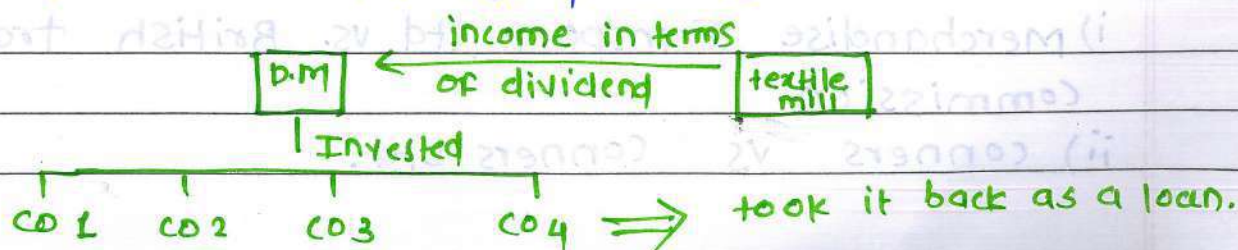

Lifting of corporate veil

- ① company has a separate legal entity from its members. This principal is called the 'veil of incorporation'.
- ② Advantage of incorporation can be enjoyed by only those who can make honest use of company.
- ③ However, whether the legal entity of corporate body is misused for fraudulent & dishonest purpose, individuals concerned not allowed to take shelter behind corporate entity of the co.
- ④ In such case, company and members are considered as same person, and not different from each other.
- ⑤ Thus, when unlawful business carried by the company, then company will lose its separate legal entity and person concerned will be personally liable.

Circumstances in which court may lift the corporate veil :

A] protection of Revenue from tax implication of Government

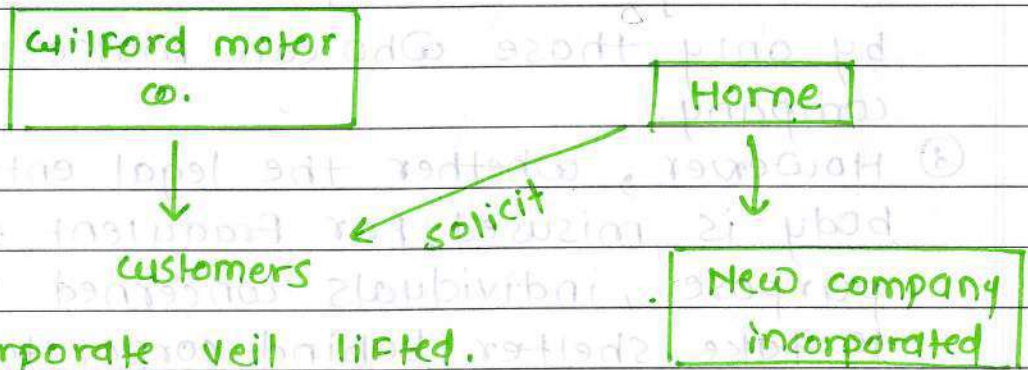

i) Dinshaw Maneckji Petit vs CIT

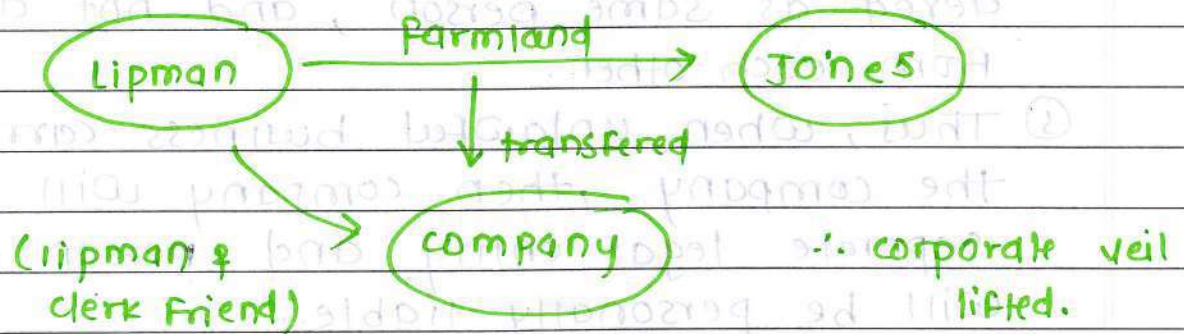

ii) Juggital vs. CIT

3] For preventing fraud and Improper conduct

i) Wilford motors company vs Horne

ii) Jones vs. Lipman.
