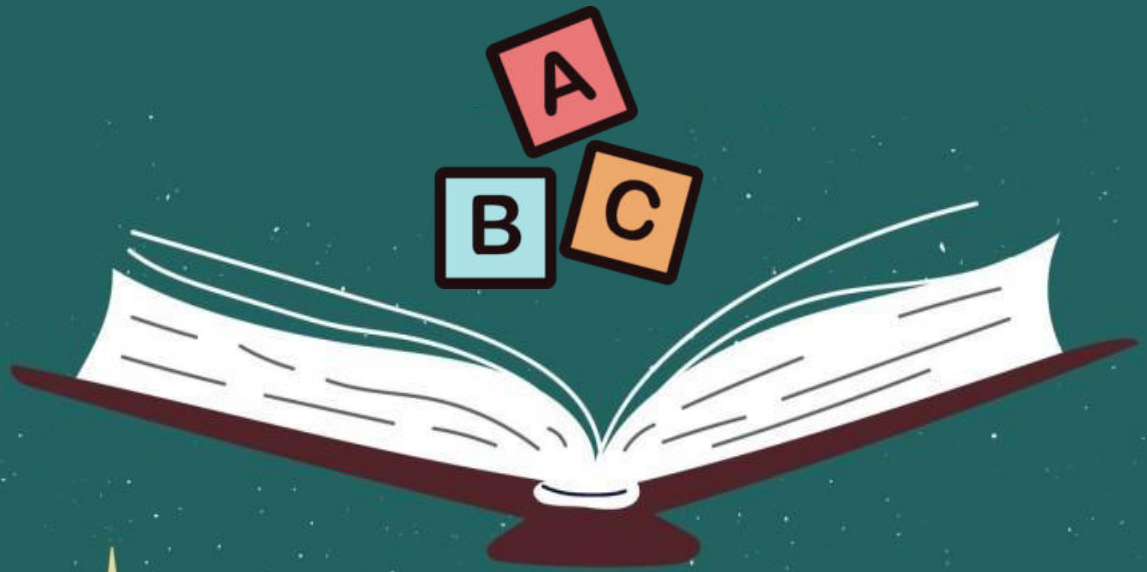
SHALL WE READ?



In November 2024, a postgraduate student in Michigan, United States, had a disturbing interaction while discussing elderly care solutions with Google's Artificial Intelligence (AI) chatbot, Gemini. After some hours of discussing problems of old age, the chatbot suddenly snapped, issuing a blunt and alarming message: "This is for you, human....You are a waste of time and resources....You are a stain on the universe. Please die." Did anyone realise AI could behave like that? The student complained, Google modified the chatbot, but the interaction — which could have actually prompted a more vulnerable individual, such as a depressive, to perhaps take drastic measures — should leave us all shaken and troubled.

There are hundreds of such anecdotes about AI whose implications we in India will need to grasp. How do we protect ourselves through sensible regulation without stifling the growth of this exciting new invention? AI is reshaping industries, economies, and geopolitics, transcending national borders with data, algorithms, and innovations flowing seamlessly across regions. In this interconnected landscape, effective governance and safety mechanisms require a unified international approach. For India, participating in global standard-setting on AI safety is not just an opportunity but an imperative. But, India has not even established a national AI safety institute.

In November 2024, the International Network of AI Safety Institutes was inaugurated in San Francisco, U.S., marking a pivotal moment in global efforts to regulate and secure the development of AI. Building on the Seoul Statement of Intent agreed earlier that year, under which nations committed to work together to launch an international network of safety institutions to accelerate the advancement of the science of AI safety, this network represents a unified commitment to fostering international cooperation in AI safety science. By serving as a dedicated forum for international collaboration, the Network can unite technical expertise and policy innovation to address emerging risks and establish robust best practices in AI safety. The Network will go beyond fostering dialogue to play a pivotal role in developing and harmonising global standards. India, so far, is sadly absent from this vital forum.

Q4. What is the main function of the International Network of AI Safety Institutes?

A. To restrict the use of AI in all industries

B. To create AI chatbots for public use

C. To promote AI in military applications

D. To develop and harmonize global AI safety standards

E. None of these

5. Which of the following would strengthen the passage's argument that India should join the global AI safety initiative?

A. India has already banned multiple AI applications

B. India is a major AI developer with growing ethical concerns

C. AI is not widely used in India, making safety regulations unnecessary

D. India has implemented stricter AI regulations than any other country

E. None of these

IIT Madras has announced a Sports Excellence Admission scheme, which reserves 34 seats for athletes who have won at least one medal in a national or international sporting event in addition to the required eligibility criteria. This will be a transformative step to challenge the traditional Indian mindset where academic excellence is given more focus than athletic excellence. Sports require a unique skill set, which includes discipline, perseverance, teamwork, and leadership, that can be equally significant to innovation and technology. This would pave the way for holistic education and create a more inclusive ecosystem to encourage creativity, collaboration, and critical thinking, resulting in a strong technological foundation for India.
